

RAM MEMORY

This is the third and the most complex memory unit. In this very case, it consists of two types of registers: general-purpose registers and special-function registers (SFR). Both of them are divided for memory banks, which will be explained later in the chapter.

Even though these registers are cleared when power goes off and even though they are manufactured in the same way and act similarly, their functions do not have many things in common.

